

Beacon House Supervision
Group for Therapists
Working with Complex
Trauma in Adults

ABOUT THIS SUPERVISION GROUP

This is a supervision group for therapists and professionals working with adult clients who have experienced childhood adversity and trauma.

This is a client group who can present with beliefs about themselves as being damaged, defeated or worthless as well as feelings of shame and guilt. There may be both a strong desire for help and alongside this a belief that nothing will make a difference. Clients may also have difficulty trusting others and sustaining relationships and this can often present in the therapeutic relationship.

The supervision group will offer an opportunity for therapists (with the support of the supervisor and the other supervisees) to zoom out and consider with some distance the dynamics that are happening in the consulting room. Therapists who enjoy reflecting widely and deeply about their work with this client group, learning from others and sharing their clinical experiences and ideas are very welcome to join this supervision group.

The supervision group will support therapists to reflect on:

- How to respond when complex trauma shows up in the therapeutic relationship
- Dealing with professional feelings of uncertainty and inadequacy
- The dance of rupture and repair
- Working with parts or multiple self-states in clients
- Working with risky behaviours

GROUP COMMITMENT

Participants will be invited to sign up for 6 monthly supervision sessions at a time. The group will be 'closed' so that we can create safety and predictability within the space.

THIS SUPERVISION IS SUITABLE FOR:

Qualified counsellors, psychotherapists and clinical psychologists working with the impact of adverse childhood experiences and trauma in adult clients.
